Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: .be accorded the credit for either the introduction or the practical perfection of methods, both for suprapubic and perineal operations, which have made these radical operations comparatively safe and most satisfactory. If one may judge by the interest manifested at the meeting last year of The International Society of Surgery, in Brussels, there was no topic which men discussed more actively nor more interestedly than prostatectomy, while the three hundred surgeons present seemed equally divided in opinion as to the respective merits of the two routes. It is not proposed to go into this question here, but simply to record the fact that to-day there is scarcely a topic in surgery which evokes greater interest. It was the work done by Otis upon the normal caliber of the urethra, which led to the perfection by Bigelow of his method of litholapaxy, or evacuation by crushing in...
